

GED Preparation Classes

2018-2019 Registration

Passing the GED tests is a way to earn a secondary school credential without graduating from a traditional high school. The GED is a seven-and-a-half hour exam with four separate test sections that measure knowledge and skills that are expected of high school graduates. South Carolina does not require GED candidates to take a prep course before sitting down to take the tests. However, enrolling in a preparatory course can help familiarize you with what is on the test, the types of questions you will be asked and the computer format being used for the GED. And a prep course might help increase your scores. In our GED Prep classes we identify what skills you already have, what skills you need to work on, and teach you test taking skills to alleviate anxieties you may have.
